Nestled amidst the scenic beauty of the Himalayan mountains, the Della Resort in Ladakh offers an unforgettable experience for adventure enthusiasts. The resort is just 10 km from the famous Hemis Monastery and is surrounded by snow-capped mountains.

The property, surrounded by a dense forest and a lake on the fourth, is a perfect destination for corporates wanting to hold leadership or team-building programs and families and friends wishing to have a different, memorable holiday. The idea of a luxury destination, which runs a boot camp emerged from the simple idea of taking people on an outdoor trek, says Misra. It was then extended to training. “I always wanted to do something different, something that has never been attempted earlier,” says Misra. “With this project, we wanted people to understand and experience the military way of life, create a sense of patriotism and have a unique and memorable holiday.”

So, after you buckle it out on an obstacle track, relax in your room’s Jacuzzi. After learning to drive different vehicles and self-defence moves, you’re ready to hit the road. After the treks, relax in your suite, well-cooked food and drinks, and go on a night trek. The instructor will teach you to create fire without a matchbox, determine the right direction by gazing at the sky and filter water without boiling. “I think that is a perfect setting for corporate training,” says Misra. “However, it is a challenge for companies that need training sessions in a luxurious setting.”

Through Misra is confident that the MICE sector in India will grow in the coming years, that coupled with families make for Della’s main clientele currently. “Something of this sort has never been attempted in India and I believe that people will love the concept as here you can get a taste out of your holidays.”
